JUDGE:

RE: Speaking Invitation
Institute on World Affairs of
San Diego State University
San Diego, California
February - May 1988

Director of the Institute on World Affairs at San Diego State University (SDSU), George Bergstrom, has invited you to address the Institute sometime during the 1988 spring semester. The suggested format is 20 minutes of remarks followed by a 10 minute question and answer period. Although the topic of the speech would be of your choice, discussion of the international scene would be preferred. You could expect an audience of approximately 100 - 130 graduate and undergraduate students, faculty, and community members interested in international affairs. The meeting would be a media event. Previous speakers have included many foreign ambassadors to the US. (See opposite list of previous speakers.)

The Institute on World Affairs of San Diego State University, founded in the early 1940s, is the second oldest institute of international relations west of the Mississippi. Although the Institute was defunct for a short period of time, the University reactivated it in 1987. SDSU is one of the many branches of the California State education system.

Since you may want to address a World Affairs group in either Los Angeles or San Francisco this spring (background is being prepared for you), I recommend that you decline this invitation. If you agree, attached is a letter of regret for your signature.

Dear Judge Webster:

The Institute on World Affairs of San Diego State University begins its 46th year in the Spring of 1988. During the past 45 years, it has been addressed by a large number of distinguished diplomats, government officials, Nobel Laureates, academicians and other specialists on world affairs. These speakers have presented a wide range of international issues to university members and the people of Southern California.

We are presently arranging the Institute schedule of speakers for the February through May 1988 semester. Being familiar with the appropriateness of your background and expertise to the scope of the organization, it is a pleasure to extend this invitation asking you to address a Thursday evening session of the Institute sometime during the Spring 1988 semester. These sessions will meet weekly on campus each Thursday evening from 11 February through 5 May 1988, excepting Thursday, 31 March.

If you are able to speak to the 1988 Institute during one of the evenings noted, we would be most honoured and pleased to learn of your agreement and proposed chosen speaking date.

While looking forward to your reply, I am,

BACKGROUNDINSTITUTE ON WORLD AFFAIRS

The INSTITUTE ON WORLD AFFAIRS at San Diego State University, which begins its 46th year in 1988, is the second oldest organization of its kind west of the Mississippi River. The purpose of the Institute, as it always has been since it was founded in 1942, is to make available to the members of S.D.S.U. and the people of Southern California, a comprehensive forum in which the most current and authoritative interpretations of international affairs can be discussed. This purpose is accomplished by inviting distinguished authorities to address the Institute on issues of international import. Speakers at the Institute have included scores of prominent diplomats, academics, military officials, Nobel Laureates and governmental officials. During the recent past Spring 1987 session alone, some eight ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary spoke to separate sessions of the Institute. Other representative past speakers were Nobel Laureates Harold Urey, Linus Pauling and Willary Libby, academics Hans Morgenthau and Alexander Kerensky, as well as several scores of diplomatic and governmental representatives from Europe, Asia, the Middle East, Africa and Latin America. This vast diversity has actively functioned under the organization's ancient Latin motto----AUDIATUR ET ALTERA PARS----Let The Other Side Also Be Heard.

The audience at the Institute on World Affairs consists of 100 plus attendees, made up of S.D.S.U. faculty, staff and students, along with certain off-campus guests. Each session meets at the San Diego State University campus in Nasatir Hall-100 Auditorium from 8:00 until 9:30 P.M., on Thursday evening, from February through May. The speaker's address is normally about 40 minutes in length, covering a subject pertaining to his view on contemporary international affairs. The opportunity for the Institute audience to raise questions and ask for elaboration on points made by the speaker generally follows the address. This format has been successfully followed during the history of the program. Throughout those 45 years, the Institute on World Affairs has served as an active and prominent center where a vast multitude of speakers have reviewed international affairs and engaged in the exchange of viewpoints. As the nations of the world become increasingly interdependent, and the threat of near-instant international nuclear destruction becomes progressively precarious, the necessity for this forum of international review and exchange becomes even more incandescently pressing and critical.
